

Setaweet

Training

Trainer's booklet

Content

Acknowledgment	I
Setaweet	II
About the Training	III
Understanding the manual	IV
Glossary	V
Our Students	VI
Title 1: Starting the Training	1
Title 2: Sex and Gender	4
Sexism	7
Privilege Exercise	9
Title 3: Healthy Love	11
ABC's of Consent	12
Meron and Abel	14
SECOND DAY	19
Title 4: The power of Self	21
Myth of Beauty	23
My Mirror	23
Self-Love	24
Title 5: Sisterhood	25
Title 6: challenging Masculinity	33

ACKNOWLEDGMENT

Setaweet would like to thank the individuals and organizations who supported her in preparing and providing this training. Setaweet's staff and partners, members of the advisory board, Hiwot Emishaw and Befeqadu Hailu, who allowed us to use their articles for the training. Setaweet would also like to thank the schools that gave us permission for the training to take place.

SETAWEET

Who is she?

Setaweet is a social enterprise engaged in feminist activism.

What does she do?

As a social enterprise she engages in feminist research, events and trainings. Her researches are both commissioned or fundraised. Setaweet will be commissioned to do research by different organizations- she also raises fund to conduct her own researches. Setaweet conducts trainings for different organizations on assertiveness, Gender Based Violence and Sexual Harassment. She also organizes any event with a feminist content.

How does Setaweet reach her audiences?

Setaweet's outreach is through media, Gendershops and by building on existing relationships. Our Interns and Alumni are also part of this outreach.

What does she want to achieve?

Setaweet works to create a consciousness shift on gender equality in Ethiopia.

What does this consciousness shift look like?

Consciousness shift for Setaweet is showing the existence of gender inequality and establishing that such inequality is the result of a patriarchal system that serves as a tool of oppression. This also means creating consciousness on language and representation as a tool for the continued existence of this inequality. Consciousness shift further includes questioning masculinity and womanhood as well as strengthening sisterhood and rediscovering one's worth. For Setaweet a real consciousness shift is one that is intersectional.

How does she do this?

- Through knowledge production
- Through gendershops
- Through media campaigns
- Through activism
- Through partnership

About the training

About the Training

This is a two-day workshop by Setaweet in schools, tries to create a critical shift in consciousness around gender norms within schools in order to reduce tolerance to gender-based violence.

‘Gendershops’ are highly participatory, dynamic and challenging. This two-day workshop is directed by targeted activities that will provoke thoughts for discussion. Participants will set goals, participate in critical discussions and discover a way forward that will create change in their school.

Purpose

Through these workshops, Setaweet aims to create a critical shift in consciousness around gender norms within the schools in order to reduce the school community’s tolerance to of gender-based violence. The changes we envision include questioning accepted norms and differentiating gender and sex, challenging the “Normal” and being conscious enough to notice everyday sexism/ stereotypes.

The Gendershops Theory of Change

The Gendershops are designed with the conceptualization of the schools as definite eco-systems; activities, scenarios and contextualization will be based on the realities within the school. In this, the workshops can effectively problematize gender relations in the school to question dominant forms of masculinities and femininities, challenge gender-based stereotypes as well as sexist narratives and equip the participants with an ability to identify the gendered norms that box them, the male privileges and forms of women’s inferiority that make violence possible.

Understanding the Manual

This manual was prepared for schools, all the examples and activities are shaped within schools.

There is a glossary in this manual. This glossary helps us understand the meanings and understandings of words that we frequently use.

In this manual, you will find that the descriptive words for women come first and that the male descriptive words follow. This is to show a different approach as male descriptive words are always written first.

This manual gives an answer to frequently asked questions. Because this manual does not answer all the questions, it is recommended that trainers support themselves with other readings.

There are useful advises for trainers in this manual. Trainers need to focus and understand these advises.

Glossary

Stereotyping: giving people the same thought or perspective about their personality, interests, and so on. These stereotypes have been developed by society, and the application in this book addresses gender-based stereotypes.

Questioning: A thorough investigation and inquiry

Femininity: A person who meets the standards of femininity in society (in dressing, behavior, acting). This term is used as an insult to men, and to women, it shows that she met the metrics of femininity well.

Gender: Roles, responsibilities, spaces and behaviors given to men and women by society.

Sisterhood: In this book, sisterhood implies solidarity and support among women.

Sex: It refers to what we naturally call female and male; this is a biologically based difference.

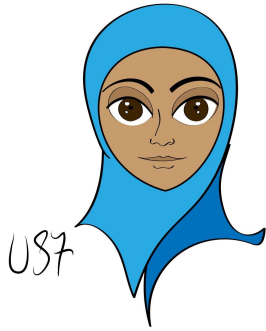

Sexism: Gender-based stereotypes or situations of underestimation.

Privileges: are Benefits created by different situations in the community that are given to a person or a group.

Masculinity: Indicates masculine behaviors or abilities in this book, set by the society.

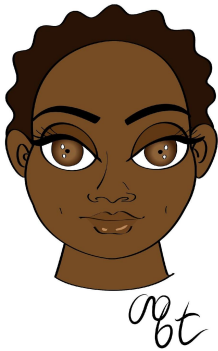

Masculine: A person who meets the standards of masculinity in society (in dressing, behavior, acting). This term is used as an insult to women, and to men, it shows that he met the metrics of masculinity well.

Our Students

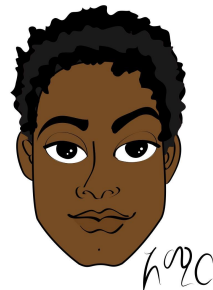

Her name is Hayat. She is well known for her ability in Football. Wherever she is, there's a ball. She always carries a ball and likes to play and talk about football every chance she gets. Because it's her favorite subject, Hayat is interested in math. But because she wants to join the national team in the future, she'd like to take football training.

Her name is Meron, and everybody knows her of her beauty and dressing style. A lot of people are close to her because she is good for everyone. But, despite what everybody thinks of her, Meron doubts herself.

Metti, is well known for being excellent in her education. She advanced to a high school with a high grade and made her school proud. Metti is well known for her sociability and everybody is her friend. Even though she is not sure what she wants to become in the future, she wants it to be related to computers. Technology makes Metti happy.

His name is Amir. He is very friendly and likes to laugh and play with a lot of people. He has no idea what he wants to become since he entered high school. He is often worried with question from his family and relatives about what he's going to choose. His father wants him to continue in business as he does, but he never wants to. Had he is not worried about what his family would say, he is passionate about acting and poetry. He spends his spare time writing poetry and acting plays he'd seen on television to his friends.

His name is Abel. He is well known by everybody for his handsomeness. They say that he is arrogant because he has a high level of self-esteem, but many people don't understand that it offends him. He is never worried about his future choice because he always knew he wants to be a judge. He is sure in his decisions and actions. Abel likes music and never misses a new song.

His name is Biniam. He is very quiet and is an introvert. Even though has few close friends, he is very close with Metti. Because Biniam is excellent in his education, everybody admires him. Metti and he represented their school in a competition repeatedly. Infact, they won a cup from their sub city once. He knows what everyone expects from him, so he does not have much uncertainty about the future

Starting the Training

Trainers will introduce themselves to participants before starting the training. To do so, they need to tell them their names, where they came from (from Setaweet and working in private) and what they want to do with the training. They then ask the participants the names of the participants and what they expect from the training. While one trainer is choosing the trainees the other trainer will right things mentioned as a training objective.

Useful Tip

Trainers must describe the training objectives as follows:

‘We’ll discuss different topics in these two days we spend together. We came here to discuss, share ideas and learn from each other, especially on social relationships, our roles and views.

When this is mentioned you can write the following objectives:

- Creating discussion
- Questioning and challenging common gender systems
- Creating a better environment at our school

After writing the objectives, trainers will move on to the next activity.

Trainers tell attendees that they will then create a safe space. They must tell the participants we do this to make the most of our time and that we can all be equally engaged and happy.

Activity 1: Creating a safe space

Trainers inform participants that it is a safe space and that each is responsible for the other person's feelings. Ask each participant to write some things down on a piece of paper, asking them what the barriers are to stop them from speaking freely, stopping their thoughts or expressing their emotions.

Example: laughing, mockery, gossiping, judging, lack of confidentiality.

They will then be asked to drop the papers into the box outside the enclosed room: By doing this, we need to make the participants understand putting these things outside of the training space will make it safe, comfortable, and free for all expressions.

Along with that, Trainers will have to help the participants come up with rules of the room. These rules will help the participants express what they don't want and good things they want to be there.

Example of good activities: Supporting, motivating each other

Once the training room has been secured, trainers will move on to the next phase of communication and coordination.

Activity 2: Creating Compassion

Trainers, ask the participants to write down the answer for the following question to create compassion. Post the answers on the wall to create compassion by reminding them how similar and coordinated the answers are.

What is the most valuable to you?

PAGE 1 MERGEFORMAT 1

Sex and Gender

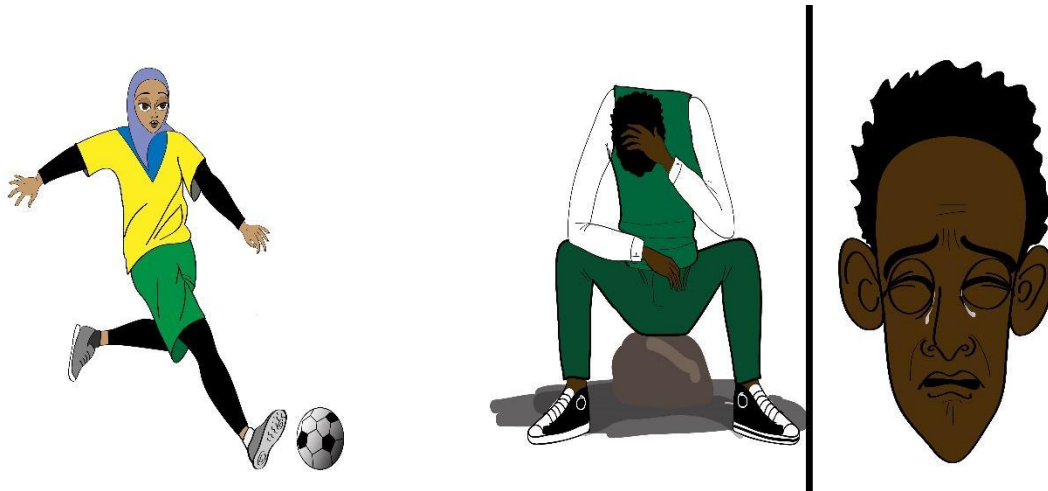

A. Sex and Gender

Objective of the training

The objective of the training is to help the participants understand the difference between sex and gender. The training shows that gender is a socially constructed in opposition to sex, which is natural. With this, you can understand the benefits of dominance that come with men as well as how gender leads behavior and action. In addition, participants will be aware of the fact that gender motivates stereotypes, limit dreams, as it restricts personal skills and identity and results social stigma and bad reputation. In addition, this training shows that women are more at risk because of gender and stereotypes or benefits of dominance.

Training Result

After this training the participants will recognize the difference between sex and gender. With this, they'll be able to differentiate gender-specific class from sex based things. In addition they'll understand gender-based stereotypes and benefits of dominance.

Trainers start with the next activity.

Activity 3: Differentiating sex and gender

Trainers make participants stand/sit in circles; Next, By giving the participants a ball, they will be asked to throw the ball around saying something that'll define or call someone a female. This activity must be recorded by another trainer. After doing this for 10 minutes, the same activity will go on for things that will define or call someone male for another 10 minutes. Then, have participants sit down and have a 30-minute discussion on the things and ask which one is sex indicator and which one is a community-based measure.

Example: The following things could be mentioned

For women: They're a mother, afraid, have a long hair, wear makeup, wear a dress

For Men: They're a father; they're strong, wears trousers.

Useful Tip

The trainer who leads the game have to participate in the game and add things that are not mentioned by the participants.

Sex
Menstruation
Men's voice will change when they hit adulthood		Men are frustrated and close to violence
Women's breast grows when they hit adulthood		Women likes to talk
Men and women are different with their bodies		Women are emotional, Men don't cry

Next, the trainers should have the participants sit down and discuss on the things mentioned.

Questions for discussion

- Which of these do you think is natural and which community-based metrics do you think?
- How can we differentiate them?
- Mention other gender behaviors, responsibilities and class you know
- How can these things be explained in our lives?

Trainers will need to keep the above discussion to lead to the next one.

Sexism

Training Objective

This training will help participants understand sexism and its impact. Specifically, this explains how sexism is incorporated into our language in our daily activities. Along with that, it shows how it strengthens gender roles and limits the role of people.

Training Result

Participants will be able to identify sexism after this training. They will be able to identify this in language and day to day activities. It also helps them investigate their own sexism.

- Sexism in language

Trainers should engage participants to discuss, mentioning language and expressions that describe sexism.

Expressions: You're a man, child of a woman (as an insult), like a woman

Next, ask participants to mention expressions they know that reflect sexism.

Useful Tip

Ask participants what they think by giving examples that they did not mention.

Expressions: Trusting a woman is like grabbing a cloud

Shaken by a woman is done by a man

A woman and a mouse belongs at the kitchen

A woman and a priest ***

Activity 4: Sexism in Media

Demonstrate two sexism-oriented ads and discuss. And then discuss about how to live without sexism and how it has to be represented in advertisings and media.

Discussion Questions

- What did you observe from this?
- How can these kinds of expression cause a problem?
- Is there any other that you know?

Trainers then discuss with participants what the benefits of gender-based dominance are.

Activity 5: privilege Exercise

Ask participants to make a line to compete. Then, ask them to take a step forward if the things that are going to be mentioned applies to them, and stand where they are if not. Then, mention the following things one by one.

{The following points states the benefits of dominance by combining economic differences and disability with gender.}

1. When I get to school, I have no problem getting in and out of transportation.
2. There is no road I choose or leave fearfully to go or come to school.
3. I am not afraid to go home late after library of educational clubs
4. I don't have a workload at home after school or on vacation
5. The toilets in the school are comfortable for me
6. I never got harassed when coming to school
7. I am not afraid to be attacked for not accepting a love request
8. People have never touched my body without my permission

Then ask the participants to look around and what they observe.

- . Who would win in the competition?
- . What does this competition indicates?

Then have the participants sit down and discuss on the benefits mentioned. Ask them to add other benefits they know.

Explanation

1. When I get to school, I have no problem getting in and out of transportation.
{This relates to disability. It shows the benefits others have}
2. There is no road I choose or leave fearfully to go or come to school.
{This shows the violence against women and the choices women make in fear of violence}
3. I am not afraid to go home late after library of educational clubs
{This shows the violence against women and the choices women make in fear of violence}
4. I don't have a workload at home after school or on vacation
{This shows the pressures of the role assigned to women}
5. The toilets in the school are comfortable for me
{This relates to disability. Uncomfortable toilets are more likely to put pressure on people with disabilities and women}
6. I never got harassed when coming to school
{This shows violence against women}
7. I am not afraid to be attacked for not accepting a love request
{This shows violence against women}
8. People have never touched my body without my permission
{This shows violence against women}

After finishing this, ask the participants what they learned so far, before going for a break. Ask some of the participants to write the question after some have spoken.

Note

Some of the benefits outlined above are those that make the road to life easier for some, and difficult for others, and help start the race on an equal basis. Benefits are not just based on gender, but also includes disability, economic status, urban and rural living.

For example: Transportation services and toilets can be difficult because they are not convenient for their situation. And this makes their life difficult.

In a similar way, other people put pressure on different people.

C. Healthy Romantic Relationships

Training Objective

This training aims to show what healthy love is and what it is like to have an unhealthy relationship. It shows that healthy love is consented and safe from violence. It also aims to show participants that healthy love means supporting each other.

Training Result

After this training, participants will understand what healthy love is and challenge their misconceptions about relationships. So they can identify harmful relationships. Especially, they'll be more aware of consent.

Activity 6. (40 mins)

Ask the participants to read and show their agreement with a red card given or raise their hands on a coffee/tea break. Have them raise their green card or hands if they agree with all, or, if they are not sure, raise their yellow cards or three fingers.

Would you give your guest a coffee if they accept your offer?

Would you give your guest a coffee if they are not sure whether to drink or not after you offered?

Would you give your guest a coffee to your guest after refusing to drink?

Would you force your guest to drink your coffee you already prepared because they accepted your offer, but changed their mind?

Would you force your guest to drink your coffee, if they don't like it after testing accepting your offer?

Would you force your guest to drink your coffee you already prepared saying you made it for them because they asked you for it the previous time they were with you, but refused to drink now?

If your friend refused to spend the night together, would you force her to do so?

If your friend agreed to spend the night together, but changed her mind saying she's not in the mood after you are ready, would you force her to do so?

You used to have intercourse every time you meet with your friend. But If she refused to have it today, would you force her to do so just because you always used to?

Discussion Question

- Discuss in every question asking a reason for their answers

Useful tip for trainers

The objective of this activity is to show consent is always necessary and that we should not presume on people's approval.

Activity 7: Meron and Abel (40 mins)

Discuss with participants after reading the following story.

Meron and Abel are together. It's been 2 years since they start dating. Amir is one of Meron's closest friends. Meron and Amir understand each other in so many ways and he makes her laugh.

The relationship between Meron and Abel always irritates Abel. Meron and Abel argue about this all the time.

Her friends always tell her Abel is jealous because he loves her and that a man don't like it when other touch what is his, when she cries and tell them about their argument.

They tell her that Abel and she are compatible and she must not lose him. If this infuriates him, they tell her to stop her relationship with Amir.

One day they are arguing as usual after he saw Meron saying hello to Amir.

Abel: You know I am not happy with your relationship with this kid.

Meron: I told you there's nothing between us, we're just friends

Abel: There is no such thing. A man would never be with a woman without expecting anything.

The more Meron tried to make him understand, the more Abel gets furious, and he takes her phone.

When he saw her call log with Amir, he pushed her away and left.

When she was following him explaining, he turned around and slapped her.

Meron is confused what to do after this. She feels like she don't have a healthy relationship with Abel. But then again, what her friends are saying is making her more confused.

Finally, she decided to end her relationship with Abel because it's not healthy and will potentially hurt her.

Discussion Question:

- What do you think about Meron and Abel's relationship?
- Was it healthy?
- Do you agree with her friends' advice?
- What would you advise her if it was you?
- Do you agree with Meron's decision?

Note

The following are the characteristics of a healthy relationship

- Equality
- Consensual
- Support and Compassion
- Motivational
- Supportive
- Believes in discussion
- Trust

PAGE * MERGEFORMAT 1

Characteristics of unhealthy relationship

Trainers will end the day asking the participants to read the material about sexism and write the sexism they noticed in their lives.

Second Day

Before starting the training, make the participants line up into two male and female groups separately.

Activity 8: Creating Compassion (15 mins)

Trainers separate the participants in two groups and have them discuss about the difficult day in their lives. And then ask them say what they learn or know about each other in one word.

Biniam: Last time I was walking down the road, and students from the other class was following me and harassing me. I was so mad, my day was ruined.

Metti: Oh, I'm sorry. They are always like that. They harass me too. Hang in there, and if there is anything I can help you with, I'm here.

Useful Tip

Trainers must encourage participants to use good words. If needed, they have to demonstrate the activity.

Examples of good words: Strong, a good person, kind

The Power of Self

D. The Power of Self

Training Objective

This training aims to help participants confident. It also helps participants to be confident both in their inner self and figure.

Training Result

After this training, participants will understand that beauty doesn't have one way of manifestation and that everybody has their own beauty. In addition it helps them know themselves and be confident.

Activity 9: Myth of beauty

Participants are asked to be a film producer and to select their lead actor/actress. They only have been told the lead actor/actress has to be 'beautiful'. Ask them to choose their actor/actress. Next, show them a picture of different people with different face, color and body figure to pick one (male and female separately). After they pick, ask them what their criteria for beauty is and discuss about the society's beauty perceptions.

Discussion Questions:

- What is the measurement of beauty?
- What is the benefit of fulfilling that criterion? What happens to those who don't meet that criterion?

After discussing on this well, move on to the next activity

Activity 9: Myth of beauty

Trainers ask participants 5 internal and external things they like about themselves.

After they're done with this, trainers will move on to the next part.

Activity 11: Being female / Femininity (for women) (30 mins)

What are the measurements for being a female? What or How should a female have or react to be called feminine?

Activity 12: Self-love (both for male and female)

Trainers ask the participants to read the following article

Useful Tip

Explain the difference between self-love and being selfish during the discussion.

There's someone who loves you more than anybody else. This person loves, respects, holds you dear, motivates and supports you more than anyone. This person is always happy about you. They never lose hope on you. They will pick you up when you fall over and over again. This person makes you strong, stands for you, admires your beauty, defends your rights and teaches you from your mistakes.

The love of this person has no limits, its everlasting, it'll die with you and transcends after death.

*This person is you.
You're not below anyone.
When you love yourself without limitations, you will attract people.
The only person to be you is you.
You are enough.*

Sisterhood

d

E. Sisterhood

Training Objective

This training aims to create sisterhood between women. Women usually have a relationship based on judgement and critic than supporting each other. In addition women blame other women who experienced violence. Encouraging sisterhood helps women to support each other and strengthen their relationships.

Training Result

After this training participants will recognize the benefits of sisterhood and know how to support each other. Participants will understand things that are opposite to the values of sisterhood.

Activity 13:

Tell participants to read the following story and discuss.

Me too

By Hiwot Emishaw

It's in 8th grade, one day after we came back from break.

I wanted to die right then and there when Nebiat and Shimelis point their fingers to the blood stain on my white dress under my buttock, singing the following with a melody of 'Ye woyn abebaye"

Yewer abebaye

(Yewer)

Yewer abebaye

(Yewer)

Yewer abebaye simeta

Etekemalehu be fota

I wanted to turn into a dust and sink on the floor and scatter up to the roof, every student in grade 8th c was drumming the floor singing together and laughing out loud. Before the laughter fades in and my cry for help stops, my friend Solomon climbed up on a desk and shouted

"Shut up you dogs! Why are you barking like a dog sniffing blood?"

But instead, the laughter grew even louder and students started barking like a dog.

“WOO...WOO...WOO...WOO”

Again, with the lead of Nebiat and Shimelis another song filled the class room.”

“Selam ena Sele min ena min nachew

Kebena wenz gar

Dingay lay tekemtew

Sismat sitsimew

Bedenb ayenachew!”

When the singing keeps on getting louder, Solomon buried his head on his table and I continued crying. That day I saw how people shame a man who stands for a woman experiencing violence, by Sele.

(After this incident Sele ignored me until end of school saying ‘you embarrassed me’.)

Our Amharic teacher, Babi, walked in while the chattering and laughter was getting even louder.

Every student is afraid of teacher Babi.

He is tall, fat and chubby. His hair is wild. With a white base, his eyes are red and big. His lips have two colors and are big, half black and half red.

The rook went silent.

I looked at his scary face fearlessly thinking ‘Thank God he is here. He’ll straighten them’.

“What’s all this noise?” he shouted.

Everybody kept quiet.

“I said what all this noise is! Who started it?... speak!”

Again, everybody kept quiet.

“If you don’t tell me who started it, I’ll whip everyone here! ... you think I’ll get tired? I’ll whip you until you bleed!”

Everybody kept quiet.

I was the only one looking up to him hoping he’ll save me. He caught me staring at him.

“What happened to you?” he asked me stretching his big lip out with disgust. When I saw the inner red of his lip, it reminded me of the blood stain on my dress and started crying again.

“Huh! Why are you sobbing? Is it because I asked you? I’ll slap you!” he came close to me and shouted.

Laughter erupted in the quite class room.

Teacher Babi came up to me and held my hand: “Be quiet you all! ... Come on now, you ... get up!... I said get up!” When he approached me, I couldn’t resist his screaming.

He grabs my hand and tries to lift me from the desk. As I cling to the desk with the rest of my hand, I resisted not lifting my foot from the ground.

“You donkey! Do not wrestle with me! This is not a game you play with your peers! Get Up!” As he pulled me with all his energy, I jumped and fell under his feet.

“I won’t get up!” I said, while he holds my hand, sitting on the floor.

“I won’t get up!?” he repeated my words giving them a gap like there’s a hurdle between them.

“Yes, I won’t get up!” I responded with a whisper.

“Why aren’t you getting up!... and speak loudly, or do you want me to bend over just to listen to you?”

Fearing that the distance between my utterance and his ear would prevent me from getting a solution, I bravely raised my voice:

“My clothes are ruined, Teacher”, I said.

“What!?”

“Please teacher, I am on my period and my clothes are ruined.” I said it in front of the full class room; I said this under the feet of my powerful teacher who attacked me as I expected to punish those who attacked me.

Again, the class room went quite.

Teacher Babi seems like he doesn’t know what he’s going to do next.

As I was waiting what he’s going to say, he said

“What’s a period? It’s called “Yewer Abeba”... or are you claiming that you don’t know Amharic?” he gave me a side looks.

When I looked up and wondering why he’s worried about the name than my problems, he looked down at me and said, "Go back ... to your desk ...!" his voice was still angry.

Even though I don’t understand why he’s returning me to a place where he found me instead of giving me a solution, I was scared;

I sat on my desk, leaping sideways so that he and the students at the back could not see me and my blood.

I do not know where the Tirufat, Senait and Dereje that were sitting next to me went but I sat alone at the desk. "

“Do you think I’d sit on a chair she painted with her blood?”, I heard Senait saying. She sat with Marta two desks back.

What Senait said hurt me more than anything because she was my friend. I sat there waiting what Teacher Babi is going to do.

“You come here!” He shouted. I didn't know who he was calling at first, so I was about to start crying again because I thought he was going to ask me to stand up again. But, I learnt he was calling Senait.

She went to him sprinting.

“Give her your jacket; let her wrap it around her waist. She will return it clean tomorrow!” he said to her.

“No teacher... my...my parents will get angry!” she said touching both her legs and her hands and swinging from left to right. Even though she was talking to him, she was not looking at him.

“Why would they get angry?” he asked her

“What if they ask me where I lost my jacket?...and..” she staring at me.

“And what?” Babi asked her again.

“..And, my jacket is yellow. What if her blood stain couldn’t get removed?” at this moment, a laughter that Nebiyat started spread like a plague in the class room.

I saw teacher Babi laughing for the first time in my life.

Even when we laugh out loud about some funny phrases like “One with a fart should not jump” he taught us, I never saw teacher Babi opening his mouth for laughter except when he’s aggressive. Today I saw him laughing at me.

Teacher Babi, who would tell us Aleka Gebrehana’s funny jokes with such bitterness, I saw him laughing for the first time at me. Not only my private part but I thought also my heart was bleeding. I thought, “Does a heart also bleed when a period arrives?”

“Stop laughing! Now!” He said struggling with his laughter.

But no one stopped because he was laughing when he said that.

“I said you’d give her! Are you saying she has to go like this? Looking like a traffic light? What if she causes an accident?” The laughter plague we After Snyder gave me her jacket under pressure and he told me to refill it well, I came home with my thighs and told me that if I didn’t return she would beat me with a rubber glove.

After Senait gave me her jacket under pressure and he told me to clean it well, or else would beat me with a rubber stick, I arrived home limping. This was the first time I saw my first menstruation, the day that made everybody laugh, but made me humiliated.

Reflecting on my humiliation and pain, I asked myself: “Why is it called ‘a monthly flower...? This is a thorn... a monthly thorn!’ I thought to myself. I ditched school for a week creating an excuse until all is forgotten.

When I get back to school, I bought ‘Pasti’ for Nebiat and Shimelis so that they won’t talk about it and make everybody laugh at me again. But what they told me about the abuse and shame that I had suffered that day.

Nebiat and Shimelis told me, my friend Senait was the one who told them about my period and dress.

“What? What did she say?” I asked in disbelief. But then again in belief from how she left me alone in our desk in that desperate hour.

“She said ‘Selam is on her period, her dress is ruined, look at her’ ” Said Nebiyat sipping his tea.

I remember, when I asked her, ‘I think my dress wet; look at it, is there anything on me?’ she said ‘There’s Nothing... you just sat on a dew... it’s just water, it will dry’ Was what my friend Senait, who failed me, said. No matter how she hates me, the reason why she did that bothered me.

Aren't we both women? We would have had one flag had we were a country, shouldn't we keep each other's privacy? Shouldn't we stand for our fallen ones?

After worrying for three days, I went to her and asked her.

This was her answer:

"They did the same thing to me in Grade 7"

Discussion Question

- What did you learn from the article?
- What are the most frequently talked about female friendship issues?
- What are the things that hurt sisterhood?
- Why is it important to strengthen sisterhood?
- How to Strengthen Sisterhood?

Note

Since things frequently told about female friendships are not good, they make women see these friendships in a bad way and run away. Above all, they set an example of what to look like as a girl-friend. Women: We can break down these stereotypes about female friendship and strengthen co-operation by strengthening sisterhood.

Challenging Masculinity

F. Challenging Masculinity

Training Objective

The purpose of the training is to challenge masculinity, to explain the pressures of masculinity and the harm that men do not pass through this measure. The idea of masculinity and real man gives you an idea of how they should be and their behavior. In this training, it helps participants to examine the meaning of masculinity, that the parameters are inappropriate and that they can become themselves.

Training Result

After this training, participants will challenge the masculinity measures they have received and understand that their identity should not be subject to this measure. They thus understand that they do not have to change themselves to think that they are to love themselves and that it does not mean that they do not meet the standards of masculinity.

Before moving into the next activity, the trainer will discuss about masculinity with participants.

Discussion Question

- What are the things that make a man a man?
- What are the measurements for masculinity?

Activity 14: Questioning the measurements of masculinity 1: 00 hour

The trainer would go into the prepared cartoon and have the participants fill out the cartoon with measures of masculinity, Then the trainer breaks it down to show the participants how masculinity limits and the problems that men who don't meet these measures face, and also tries to show the efforts men put trying to meet this standards.

Note

This activity is to test what we call masculinity standards. Thus we can determine the relevance of these parameters and identify those that are unhealthy. For example, it is not healthy for men to be angry and aggressive as a measure.

PAGE * MERGEFORMAT 1

It is also to dispel the notion that not all men should fall into this measure and that men who do not fall into this measure are not men. For example, the measure of being a fearless man does not allow men

Next, get participants to come back and talk about what they noticed

Finalizing

After Sisterhood and Masculinity is over, have participants return to a class and ask what they have learned and what they have enjoyed and not during their time in isolation.

Activity 15: Expecting what we've created 1:00 hour

Trainers return to the objectives set on the first day and paper showing what the participants want from the training and discuss.

Discussion Question

- What goals have we met?
 - How can we protect the environment we have created? What shall we do next?
- Trainers help participants to plan for the future.

Useful Tips and Pointers for Trainers

- When we talk to trainees about topics like gender, sexism and so on, don't say anything opposite to these.

- Avoid negative thoughts, think positively of all participants and understand that their ideas come from their knowledge and upbringing.
- Avoid things that make us stand out from our topic
- Giving all participants an equal amount of attention
- Get to know our class room well; Understanding and encouraging participants who do not participate, who are not given the opportunity and who are afraid.
- Understand that there is no such thing as a wrong question or an absurd answer.
- Always giving our training with a good spirit.

Frequently Asked Questions

So, are these genders wrong?

What we refer to as gender is not natural. This does not mean that they do not exist when they reflect those gender traits or roles, but because people's behaviors and roles are shaped by society, they are trained to be those. For example, the gender roles of women in the kitchen allow us to teach girls the kitchen skills from a young age and assign this role to them saying boys don't belong in the kitchen. Similarly, since these gender behaviors are not natural, they do not represent all those in that group and therefore encourage stereotyping. It also determines that people who do not reflect those behaviors are wrong and that they are just like the opposite sex. For example, boys are said to be women by smearing men who cry because we say men don't cry.

What's wrong with gender?

Gender causes people to disassociate themselves and adjust themselves to failure in this social dimension. Specifically, assigning the role of people limits you to think beyond those.

What's wrong with Sexism? For example, even if I say she's a man, it's just a saying, I know she is not a man

Language is a very important thing; language is a tool for thinking and expressing ourselves. When we applaud a person saying they're a man, it is not to express his / her gender, but to express his or her qualities or abilities that we consider to be masculine.

What are the reasons for the benefits of dominance?

The benefit of domination is that it makes things easier for others by simplifying situations for some, and it makes things easier for them to move forward as things become easier.

What are the beauty parameters? What kind of problem do they cause?

Measurements of beauty vary from community to community and are the means by which we evaluate or see what is beautiful. Because these metrics only pass by some people and most people do not, many adjust themselves to meet that requirement. It also decreases the self-esteem of those who do not.

Is the notion that depicts female friendships are bad, true?

No, it's not true. Not that there are no women with bad friendships, but bad friendships can exist between women and men. But since sisterhood is often said to be bad, it makes women suspicious of other women.

Do we challenge masculine standards because they are bad?

We challenge the parameters of the masculinity to see the limits that it causes: It is to test men with the metrics and to see the consequences of losing self-esteem. Also, to show that all men should not fall into those parameters and that they should be themselves does not imply that they are not men.